ATMI implements Workday Benefits in 66 days

PLEASANTON, CALIF.—April 6, 2009—Aggressor, the business & technology consulting firm that has successfully implemented more Workday Benefits and Payroll Integrations than any other Workday Partner, has completed another successful Workday project engagement. ATMI enlisted Aggressor for benefits implementation services because of our comprehensive experience and our ability to deliver measurable results – fast.

“Aggressor continues to accelerate the Workday implementation process, as evidenced in our ability to complete this project with ATMI in 66 days,” said David Hom, Aggressor partner. “We have an impressive team of consultants that really know how to leverage our methodology and deliver high quality solutions quickly. I am very proud of our team for what they accomplished for ATMI.”

The ATMI project included the implementation of Workday Benefits, including Employee Self Service and Passive Events, integration to all of ATMI’s benefits carriers, and benefits integration to ADP’s PCPW payroll application. Aggressor and Workday partnered closely to ensure quality as well as rapid completion of the project.

“The implementation of Workday Benefits streamlines our benefits management processes, maintains the integrity of our data, and allows ATMI to offer our employees excellent service at lower management costs”, said Kathy Minceli, ATMI’s Vice President of Human Resources. “We were very impressed at the high quality of the implementation, especially given the short time frame. Aggressor’s consultants took the time to really understand our requirements and showed us the best way to use Workday to support our business needs.”

Kevin Elmore, Aggressor’s Project Manager added, “By leveraging our proven methodology and repeatable processes we were able to deliver a solution that met ATMI’s business needs and optimized the Workday configuration. Our focus on quality and process ensures that every client will have as successful an implementation as ATMI did.”
