Aggressor helps Schumacher go live with Workday HCM and Payroll

PLEASANTON, CALIF.—December 4, 2009—Aggressor, a leading SaaS business & technology consulting firm, today announced another successful Workday project engagement with Schumacher.

Doug Menefee, CIO of Schumacher Group, is a big believer in the Cloud Computing model and Software as a Service (SaaS) applications. Schumacher has their main office located in the middle of “hurricane alley” and having on premise applications is risky business. “When we looked at the SaaS HCM offerings, Workday was the clear winner based on ease of use, intuitive navigation, and a solid technical infrastructure that supported all of our integration requirements,” said Menefee.

After deciding on Workday, Menefee chose Aggressor to run the Workday implementation because of their sterling delivery track record and their ability to quickly get Workday live so that Schumacher could maximize the benefits of the new platform. The Aggressor team assisted Schumacher with enhanced HR processes, deployment of the Workday Benefits module, deployment of the Workday Payroll application, and integrations to other software applications and third party service providers. Menefee noted that Schumacher had high expectations for the Workday platform and that “Aggressor’s experienced consultants and Workday focused methodology enabled Schumacher to quickly deploy their new HCM processes so they could realize those benefits while providing a platform that will evolve to meet Schumacher’s future needs.”

An important aspect of successful HCM delivery is the ability to manage the integrations component of projects. Here again, Menefee noted the experience the Aggressor team brought to the project - “In a SaaS model, integrations are always the most complex and risky part of the project,” said Menefee. “The Aggressor team really had the experience we were looking for - helping us with both the technical aspects of the integration and, almost as importantly, with the communication to our third party administrators.”

Kevin Elmore – an Aggressor Partner and lead consultant on the project noted – “This was a great project and we’re very happy to have helped Schumacher on their successful Workday deployment. Schumacher joins a quickly growing list of companies enjoying the business benefits provided by Workday’s SaaS platform. We’re proud to have helped over 30 companies on their road to Workday success.”
